WHAT:

On The Record. is a public education workshop series aimed at providing those who assist people with police records practical information and resources to help you with your client services.

Topics covered include: How police record information is managed and accessed; the different types of police record checks available in Ontario; the difference between non-conviction and conviction police records; and how to request to suppress or purge non-conviction information. This workshop will also provide an overview of the current legislative, human rights and privacy framework on the disclosure of police records, information about the new Ontario Association of Chiefs of Police Provincial Guideline on Police Records Checks, and the growing challenges facing individuals with police records.
